Many who voted on Tuesday not only helped one case but helped on another. For it did more in putting down the cause of intemperance than any large assembly ever seen. Of course nobody bought that barrel, which, after the head was knocked off, was dished out as free as water. Oh, no, it just grew.

A freight train passing through Washington street at the time of the funeral services of the late James Rodgers caused quite a commotion among the crowd of people in the street, who were there, nearly causing several runaways. Great indignation was expressed, for it was thought by all that there was nothing urgent in the passing at that time. Rodgers, as reported by the coroner, had not only a few moments before been taken up in the funeral cortege leaving the street, there is room for a severe reprimand.

An American Lawyer in London.

Hop, Judah P. Benjamin, according to a London correspondent, occupies an elegant suite of law chambers and has a practice which yields him $100,000 annually, for which reason he would decline a judgeship, which only pays $25,000.

Mr. Benjamin is represented as saying that he could easily secure a seat in the House of Commons, several constituencies having given him very flattering invitations to represent them, but he has no desire to go into Parliament, for the reason that he would decline a judgeship—it involves too many sacrifices.

Mr. Benjamin has a house in Paris, and always spends his summer vacations there.

A Long Trip on Now-shoes.
[Quebec Mercury.]

Mr. Birch, the Norwegian gentleman who has walked from Montreal to this city, states that his actual walking time for one hundred and eighty miles was forty-five and a half hours. He stopped several times on the way to repair and make improvements upon his spurs. Having to see a party at Deschambault, he made a detour of fifteen miles out of his route, and rode that distance by North Shore Railway from Batiscan to Deschambault. The snow-shoes upon which Mr. Birch was so successful in his trip of this week rounded at the front, about nine feet long and four inches wide, weighing about ten pounds. It is claimed that they enable the wearer to walk on ice no more than three-eighths of an inch in thickness.

OLD KENTUCKY.

RICHTON, Feb. 20.—Yesterday morning the Deputy Jailor, Hamilton, while in the act of attending the prisoners, was engaged by Deane, to jail for horse stealing, and locked in behind the bars. Deane ran to the office and returned with a pair of the jail pistols, threatening the life of Hamilton unless he surrendered the keys of the other prisoners' cells. Hamilton fled into an iron bath-room, and thus mastered the situation. Deane then took to the road, with some thirty or more of the town people, to get the Sheriff and officers to pursue him. The prisoner was tracked by his foot-prints in the snow, and finding resistance unavailing was returned safely to jail.

Dead and Decomposing.
Last evening the corpse of an unmarried woman named Mary Barbara Street, about forty-four years old, was found in a room in the rear of No. 627 Elm street. The deceased had been living in the house with three sisters, the oldest of whom is sixty years of age. The four supported themselves comfortably by sewing for various clothing houses. For some time they lived estranged and were not on speaking terms, the three women taking up their residence at 136 Pleasant street. They saw the deceased last on Sunday, when she seemed to be out of her mind.

The next day some of the neighbors saw her alive, and this was the last time.

Last evening a woman was aroused that the corpse might be dead, and when the door of the room was broken in she was found dead in bed. She was partly dressed, and on the sewing-machine near the bed were found bottles of hydrate of chloral and a potassa preparation. Decomposition had set in on the arms and sides.

Coroner Carrick was notified and visited the place last night, preparatory to holding an inquest this morning.

Mrs. Catherine Steinmetz, a sister of the deceased, testified that on Sunday last her sister looked badly and complained of being ill. She had said that she could not get along with her sister, Barbara Volz. She never told the witness that she used any medicine, but said she would not live long, and would take something to end her troubles.

Henry Yorkamp, drug clerk, testified that he gave the deceased two drams of hydrate of chloral, two drams of bromide of potassa, two ounces of water and two ounces of syrup in a four-ounce bottle, with directions to take a teaspoonful three times per day, and cautioned her to take it as directed.

He did not tell her it would kill her, if she took half of the amount at night. He wanted the medicine to cure nervousness.

Ernst Henry Strietmeyer stated that the deceased in his presence had threatened to cut her throat rather than live with her sister.

The inquest was then adjourned until to-morrow, the Coroner having ordered Dr. Trush to make a post-mortem examination to see if the woman had taken poison or not.

RIVER INTELLIGENCE.
